WE INVITE YOU TO PARTICIPATE IN A STUDY ON PARENT-TEEN CONFLICT

Dear Parent and Teen:

During adolescence many teens argue with their parents about a variety of topics. These topics can include school, going out with friends, texting and Facebook, or household responsibilities. Even teens who have good relationships with their parents disagree sometimes.

Whatever it is that you argue about, we at the Culture and Family Laboratory at UC Berkeley are interested in learning more about how parents and teens talk about conflicts.

We are currently conducting a study that involves having mothers and teens come to our lab for 1 hour to participate in a study of parent-adolescent conflict resolution.

We hope you will take this opportunity to participate in some of the exciting research going on at UC Berkeley!

PARENTS AND TEENS WILL EACH RECEIVE $20 FOR PARTICIPATING IN THIS STUDY
